

Wilson's Promontory National Park

Visitor Guide

Wilson's Promontory, or 'the Prom' as it is affectionately known, is the southern most tip of the Australian mainland. The park sustained extensive damage after a once in 300 year flood event on 22 March 2011. Nature's ability to heal has already been demonstrated at the Prom after the 2005 and 2009 fires and again, the park is healing after our flood event.

2011 flood recovery advisory

- Tidal River will reopen to the public on Friday September 23rd, 2011.
- Many parts of the Prom remain closed due to extensive flood damage. For your safety and to help the Prom recover, please abide by these closures.
- Parks Victoria are taking a staged approach to reopening flood affected areas of the park. We anticipate reopening walking tracks (including overnight hiking tracks) as soon as it is deemed safe to do so.

A changing landscape

As a natural environment, Wilson's Promontory National Park is in a state of constant, often subtle, natural change. These changes have been accelerated by the 2011 March flood event.

The park visitor will see some of the flood affected areas and the extraordinary flood recovery efforts that Parks Victoria and VicRoads staff and contractors have made to ensure visitor facilities are up and running for reopening of Tidal River.

A rich, cultural heritage

For Indigenous people, Wilson's Promontory is part of a spiritually significant land called Yiruk or Wamoom. Shell middens (shell deposits) behind many beaches date back thousands of years, demonstrating a deep time connection between Indigenous people and the Prom's land and sea.

While travelling the 30km from the park entrance to Tidal River, you may see wombats, emus, kangaroos and other wildlife.

- Pull off the road before stopping to look at wildlife. Do not stop on bends or where double lines are marked.

Squeaky Beach can be accessed from either Picnic Bay or the Lilly Pilly Gully carpark. For further information please refer to the Walking at Wilsons Prom park note, available from the Tidal River Visitor Centre.
- Picnic Bay Just a short drive from Tidal River, this beautiful beach has rock formations at both ends of the beach offering a range of intertidal rock pool habitats to explore.
